

A fond farewell to Graham

In January NVS Territory Manager Graham Fleming will retire, after 17 years with NVS and a further 22 years with Wellington's and McCarthy's, the two companies which would later become NVS.

Graham, who is a popular member of the Sales team with both customers and colleagues, is looking forward to improving his handicap on the golf course and spending more time with his family and grandchildren. Graham and his wife Sylvia are also hoping to take a trip to Paris. Speaking about his forthcoming retirement, Graham said: "I'd just like to say thank you to everyone I've been involved with over the years, both at NVS and in the Veterinary Profession".

Everyone at NVS would like to wish Graham all the best for the future, and to enjoy his retirement to the fullest.

Graham's area covers Avon, Cornwall, Devon, Gwent, Glamorgan and Somerset, and will gradually be taken over by our new Territory Manager Mark Scott. After graduating from Aberdeen University with a degree in Zoology, Mark spent three years living and working in South Africa and New Zealand. Since his return to the UK, Mark has worked in sales and marketing, starting in medical sales and then moving across to animal health which he feels is a much better working environment. His most recent position was as a TM for Boehringer Ingelheim in Northern Ireland. Mark relocated to Bristol earlier this year after a round the world trip which took in South America, New Zealand, Australia and South East Asia.

Also new to NVS is Sarah Foster, who joins us to cover Territory 6, the M40 corridor and Home Counties. Since graduating with First Class Honours in Biology from Southampton she has gained six years of customer service and sales experience. She has recently moved to the beautiful Cotswolds with her boyfriend Charlie and Kit Kat the cat.
